Wyo. ANG squadrons excel during inspection

CHEYENNE – The Wyoming Air National Guard's 243rd Air Traffic Control Squadron and 153rd Operations Support Flight excelled during an Air Traffic System Evaluation conducted April 10 - 12.

This evaluation is conducted every three years to provide an assessment of the quality, adequacy, and safety of the air traffic system supporting flying operations at the Cheyenne Regional Airport. It included an evaluation of air traffic system capability, air traffic and flight procedures, air traffic control, airfield management, terminal instrument procedures, and air traffic control and landing systems.

"I am very proud of the outstanding team of air traffic controllers and maintainers in the Wyoming Air National Guard, and you won't find better or more qualified individuals anywhere," said Lt. Col. Shelley Fuerst, 243rd Air Traffic Control Squadron commander. "I am pleased to say that the residents of Cheyenne can rest assured that the air traffic control system at Jerry Olson Field is safe and expeditious. The inspection team found that the 243rd Air Traffic Control Squadron and the 153rd Operations Support Flight are providing exceptional airfield operations services to the 153rd Airlift Wing and all other system users."
